Rehabilitation Psychology 2012

The 14th annual continuing education program is sponsored by the American Board of Rehabilitation Psychology and the Division of Rehabilitation Psychology of the American Psychological Association. The American Board of Rehabilitation Psychology (ABRP) was established in 1995 and became fully affiliated with the American Board of Professional Psychology (ABPP) in 1997. It was established to conduct examinations leading to board certification in Rehabilitation Psychology. The Division of Rehabilitation Psychology was established in 1956, with the purpose of uniting all members of the American Psychological Association with interests in the rehabilitation and prevention of disability and chronic illness.

Specific program content was developed by the program committee for the 2012 Rehabilitation Conference in the areas of: translational research methods; outcomes measurement; evidence-based practice; diversification of clinical practice; training and supervision; professional development; and legal and ethical issues.

By the conclusion of this program, participants will be able to:

1. Identify current trends and learn new skills in rehabilitation psychology practice;
2. Discuss recent clinical research findings and their potential impact on service delivery;
3. Describe the key elements of ABPP/ABRP eligibility, the practice sample submission and review, the oral examination process, and characteristics of effective mentoring;
4. Discuss key issues for training in Rehabilitation Psychology;
5. Understand fundamental issues in ethics, cultural diversity, and evidence-based practice as applied to rehabilitation psychology.

Target Audience:

This course is designed for psychologists in practice and/or academic settings who focus on rehabilitation with individuals having chronic disease and injuries and for trainees (students, interns, and postdoctoral fellows) with interests in rehabilitation psychology. Course content will be directed at both intermediate and advanced skill levels.

POSTER AND ORAL PAPER PRESENTATIONS

The Program Committee of the 14th Annual Conference "Rehabilitation Psychology 2012" has invited submissions of scientific poster and oral presentations reflecting original empirical research, novel intervention strategies, innovative program development, or other topics relevant to the practice of rehabilitation psychology.

AWARDS:

Student Poster and Research Awards

Students may submit abstracts for both poster and oral presentations. Oral presentations will be 15 minutes in length and occur during the student session on the first morning of the conference. Awards will be presented for the best student poster and the best student research presentation in Division 22.

Pediatric Rehabilitation Psychology (Section 1) Award

Section 1 will present an award to the first author of the poster that best reflects its mission. Both students and professionals are eligible for this recognition.

Women in Rehabilitation Psychology (Section 2) Award

Section 2 will present an award to the first author of the poster that best reflects its mission. Eligible posters are those related to pediatric issues and first-authored by a student.
